Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 102

1. The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(b) the invention was patented or described in a printed publication in this or a foreign country or in public use or on sale in this country, more than one year prior to the date of application for patent in the United States.

2. Claim 12 is rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(b) as being anticipated by Watanabe et al. (6,571,621) (hereinafter Watanabe).

Watanabe teaches a flow rate measuring device comprising a housing (1) having a measuring channel (6), wherein the housing is configured to be inserted into the line (31) at a predetermined alignment with respect to the main flow direction, whereby at least a portion of the intake air mass flowing in the line in the main flow direction flows through the at least one measuring channel in a first direction from an intake of the measuring channel to an outlet of the measuring channel; a measuring element (4) situated in the measuring channel for determining the at least one parameter; and a mechanism (2, 3) situated in at least one channel segment located between the intake and the outlet of the measuring channel, wherein the mechanism would inherently cause flow vortices in the at least one channel segment due to its structure.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

3. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

4. Claims 13-24 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Watanabe.

Watanabe teaches all the features of the instant invention except for the mechanism for generating vortices situated at a position in case of a reverse flow in a second direction. It would have been obvious to a person having ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made to provide the grooves and ridges at the downstream location of the measuring element since providing the vortices generating mechanism at the downstream side would generate vortices in the reverse flow direction. As to the various structures of the vortices generating mechanism, it would be within the scope of a skilled individual to provide any known structure to generate vortices within the flow path since any type of obstruction would generate such vortices in the flow, either upstream or downstream of the measuring element. Thus providing grooves and ridge (protrusion in the wall of the passage way or providing any known structure that would generate vortices would be within the scope of a skilled individual.

Conclusion

5. The prior art made of record and not relied upon is considered pertinent to applicant's disclosure. Maeda et al. (6,526,822) teaches protrusions (32, 33) at the upstream and downstream of the measuring element to generate vortices that would separate the pollution items flowing with the flow away from the measuring element.
